Special Taxes Billiard Tables and the

Enquirer
The Enquirer—local—calls to mind the fact that, at some time or other, the Mayor addressed a message to the Council recommending the passage of an ordinance to license billiard-tables and pawnbrokers' establishments, and then goes into a calculation how much the amount received from these resources would go to diminish the taxes to be paid by the rest of the people, The argument of revenue-diminution of taxes-appears to be conclusive with a majority of the newspaper gentlemen of the city, as it is with certain of our Councilmen; rendering all inquiry into the justice of the special levy entirely superfluous.

It would be well, perhaps, if Mayors and editors would try to know something of the subject upon which they assume to instruct the rest of mankind, before they commit themselves to too many absurdities. There is a provision of the organic law of the State which effectually forbids the species of enterprise which the City Executive and the Enquirer recommend. The committee of the Council to whom the communication of the Mayor was referred, probably found this out; and it was, perhaps, out of consideration for the feelings of His Honor that the thing was silently dropped.

Upon what principle of public justice the keepers of billiard-tables and pawnbrokers' shops should be required to pay a special tax under the name of license, it is difficult to understand. If these branches of business are immoral-if by their pursuit the safety or peace of the community is, in any way, endangered-they should be forbidden; if they are not immoral, where is the ground to discriminate against them in respect to the burdens of government?

The old orthodox idea was that selling ardent spirits, carrying on a theater, traveling with a show, and a variety of other things were sins, by the commission of which the public morals were endamaged. The guilty were therefore required to make a compensation in money for their offenses; and the government found it quite convenient to permit a little sin for the sake of the pecuniary profit thereby accruing. In the less saintly era of modern Democracy the propriety of this policy has been doubted, and it is a little surprising-if one has a right to be surprised at any thing in that connection-to find our Democratic cotemporary urging a return to the old plan of taxing the sinners for the benefit of the South Carolina Getting Her Pay. From the intelligence contained in the telegraphic report it would seem that the Secessionists of South Carolina are getting their pay as they go along: in other words, that the insane folly of the politicians is inflicting serious injury upon the people. Trade is to cool the rage of fire-eating valor, and bring the orators, gun-firers, and Palmettoflag-elevators to their senses, so that-if there is any ground for faith in signs-in sixty days from this time it will be hard to find, even in Charleston, a man who can remember that he took any part in secession proceedings.

It looks like just retribution that the evils . which South Carolina was about to inflict upon the North, have first, and with their heaviest weight fallen upon herself. Such pecuniary prostration and helplesauess as have come upon her in consequence of the little wild talk of disunion in which she has inconsiderably indulged, gives emphasis to the question, To what extreme suffering would she be reduced, were she to make the attempt to carry her boasts into effect?

Hely Stones.

There is ground for hope of an improvement in the Holy-stone manufacture; as, according to the disclosures of a correspondent, a copy of Genesius's Hebrew Lexicon went from one of our extensive book-houses, to the address of David Wyrick, Esq., the holy-stone finder, at Newark, Ohio, yesterday. Hereafter the defects of orthography, etymology, syntax, prosody and punctuation, in the stones now extant, will doubtiess be providentially escaped, so that were the patriarchs to come to life-which Heaven forbid-they would hardly be able to discover any difference between those of Mr. Wyrick and their own.

THE troubles in South Carolina, like other crises, are affording opportunities for defunct statesmen and politicians to galvanize themselves into some thing like the appearance of vitality, by writing letters full of patriotic sentiments, and proposing measures of pacification, to other statesmen and politicians astimid and dull as themselves. Its of no use, gentlemen! The debt you owe to nature will be neither remitted nor suspended. You had better remain quiet; for no such doctors as you can do any good in Despriment Lawyers Shot Dead.—Henry A. R's. sim was faulty, but he received S.'s fire in his left breast, and fell dead. A brother of the deceased then gained possession of the pistol of his slain relative, and shot Suider through the head, the wound proving fatal in three hours.

Burch Divorce Case-Third Day, NAPIBRVILLE, ILL., November 21,- The eading of the testimony of Carlisle Boyd reading of the lessimony of Darisis Boyd was completed this morning. He admits receiving presents of a ring and smoking-cap from Mrs. Burch, and that some slight familiarities have taken place between them. Mrs. Burch had expressed friendship and partiality for the witness, but had never en-couraged any criminal act or evinced an inclination for such. He admits receiving letters from Mrs. Burch, one of which reats him to return all articles and letters of hers in his possession; another accuses him of retaining the smoking-cap as an evidence of shame against her, and requests him to leave the city, as after what had passed between them she could not expect her husband's confidence while he remained. Wit-ness positively denies any criminal act, or having noticed any desire for such. Copies of letters to Mrs. Burch, from the witness, are attached to the deposition, in which he denies having done her wrong in thought or word, and expresses surprise as to what could have extorted from her a false charge against him. The deposition of Anna Humphrey was read. It merely shows that she saw Stuart and Mrs. Burch together in the dressing-room at Stuart's house, during a party there. Mrs. Burch was mending her dress which was torn while dancing; saw nothing improper or immodest between them.

Charles Shielcke sworn—He deposed seeing Stuart and Mrs. Burch together at a masquerade at Geo. Rumsey's; neither were masked; they stood conversing in the library for half an hour.

Cross-examined-They were not whisper-Cross-examined—They were not whispering; rooms were open to all. Is a son-in-law of Mr. Maitland who keeps an account with Mr. Burch. Mr. Burch had expressed a desire to see the witness; had an interview with him at lawyer's office. His manner was cordial; on the night of the party do not believe Mrs. Burch was masked at all. Chas. Layton, gardener to Mrs. Burch, testified—Went in Burch's employ in July, 1856; first saw Stuart in January or February of 1857, in the parlor with Mrs. Burch; while the witness was putting up a new clock over the mantel-piece Stuart gave him orders what to do; witness told Stuart he was not moster, and could not order him about; not master, and could not order him about; mrs Burch ordered him not to speak; saw them that night playing "checkers" as late as ten o'clock, with the board on their knees between them. Testified to other occasions when Stuart was there late and Mrs. B. told prostrated, the banks have ceased their issues, and suspended specie payment, and a general panic pervades the financial circles. Never, from political agitations alone in this country, have the omens of disaster been more multifarious, or more threatening than they now appear in South Carolina, and all they now appear in South Carolina, and all they now appear in South Carolina, and on one occasion Stuart had interfered with witness while putting up some grape vines; witness told Stuart he would put him out. Generally saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch; and on one occasion saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch; and on one occasion saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch; and on one occasion saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch; and on one occasion saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch; and on one occasion saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch; and on one occasion saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch; and on one occasion saw Stuart late at the house during the absence of Mr. Burch was in their goods to the Territory.

Mr. Hoffmagle, Postmaster at Mapleton, was arrexted, and threatened with hanging, but succeeded in making his escape.

Kassas Cirv, November 21—P. M.—Rumors are in circulation here, of the burning of Fort Scott, but they are not generally circles. they were doing nothing. Once he went to bed without shutting up the house, and left Stuart there, and he went to sleep before Stuart left; he knew this because he did not hear the door fustened, and could hear it plainly in his room. Had taken notes from Mrz. Burch to Stuart. Further in Regard to the Paciefi Disaster

Eleven Lives Lost One Thousand Horses and Cattle Perish in the Flames. The telegraph and the Parss have given a partial account of the burning of the Pacific; but yesterday's Louisville papers furnish full particulars of the disaster, from which we extract:

The second mate, Mr. Mahoney; the carpenter, Mr. Bradshaw; and Jacob Hess, one of the crew, first saw the fire, and suctimes; don't remember when or how long; some of the notes to Stuart I delivered to Mrs. Stuart, and some for Mr. Burnell were ceeded in breaking out the burning bales, but despite their utmost efforts the fire spread, involving the upper-works in a solid flame and at once the utmost dismay and confusion ensued among the passengers and almost all

Washington, November 21.—The Government has just been officially informed of the troubles in Kansas. Several days ago letters were received from responsible parties, addressed to the proper authorities, that Captain Montgomery had a force of probably 500 men, with plenty of arms, ammunition and other material aid, and that from time to time warlike supplies have been received by him from the North. The writer also says that the demand to adjourn the land-sate would be resorted to as a mere pretext for raising an armed force, and that on board.

Among those known to be lost by the disaster were: Captain Lamb, who was drowned from the stern of the boat; Jacob Hess, one of the crew, who had been on the boat a long time, and resided at Portland; Emily, a slave girl, the property of Mr. Hurry, the barkeeper; — Tazewell, a free negro cabin-boy, from Lebanon, Ky.; two children on deck, one an infant, and the other a girl about three years old, grand-child of an Irishwoman from Portland, who was going to New Orleans; and a female, supposed to on beard. to New Orleans; and a female, supposed to be a servant of one of the passengers. Three pretext for raising an armed force, and that the real object of this lawless organization is a raid first on the frontier of Missouri and be a servant of one of the passengers. Three females were seen to jump overboard together, and but one of them was saved. Several of the crew are missing, and one or two deck passengers; also a Mr. Marmillion, a Frenchman, who took passage from the Louisville Hotel. The most of the passengers stopped at Uniontown, and several went to Evansville on the E. H. Fairchild, and from what could be learned the above are all who cated some important particulars relative to Captain Montgomery's reported alarming movements.

what could be learned, the above are all who were missing.

A gentleman by the name of McDonald, of Indiana, in the last stages of consumption, who was a passenger on the boat with his wife, journeying South, expired in the arms of his faithful wife, amid the excitement of the occasion. She, however, clung to him until the very last, and was only forced away from the corpse by the mate, who took her off in the yawl. The boat was all in fiames around her, and she had to climb down on a fender to the water, only a moment before the deck she had stood upon fell into the raging fire below. This was after the boat had been burned loose from her moorings ashore.

The scane of the burning boat and its thousand head of live stock, all tied to the stake, a prey to the devouring flames, was fearful and horrible in the extreme. There were 750 sheep, and 130 head of fat cattle, mules and horses, all burned alive, with no chance of escape. In addition to the live stock, there was upward of 300 tans of pork, heren and flour on hoard, which together

"CLINTON, Mo., November 21, 1860 .- Sir

I am here to inform the citizens of this place of the following facts, and I have been re-quested to present them to you as Gov-ernor of the State:

"The Abolitionists, under the command of "The Abolitionists, under the command of Montgomery and Doctor Pennison, to the number of from 300 to 500, armed with Sharpe's rifles, dragoon-sabers, navy revolvers and Bowie-knives, have suddenly commenced a war of extreme ferocity on the law-abiding citizens of Southern Kansas, in the counties of Linn and Bourbon. These arms arrived by the wagon-load at or near Mound City, about one menth since in boxes.

arms arrived by the wagon-load at or near Mound City, about one month since, in boxes marked as donations for Kansas sufferers. They are all new. Montgomery has been in Boston during part of the summer and returned with plenty of money to enlist recruits. Many of his men are newly imported. He has taken possession of Fort Scott and other towns on the border near the Missouri line. He has murdered Mr. without it:
